S. G. Brown of Swanton, lost five valuable young cattle recently by their going into a field where had been left for the night a box of paris green just as it had been mixed with plaster for using on potatoes. The cattle found the box and licked up enough to cause their death, although some of them lived two or three days after eating the poison. A Young and prosperous citizen of Cornwall was out purchasing sheep the 15th, and when he returned home he found that his wife had fled. In his absence she had picked up such of the household trappings as she wanted and had them conveyed to the depot, where she took a train and started for the West. It is not known that there is any second man in the case.

A TRAM belonging to Merritt Burgess of Ben-A TEAM belonging to Merritt Burgess of Bennington came to the railroad station at North Bennington for passengers. A locomotive frightened the horses so that they became unmanageable, running desperately down the track for an eighth of a mile, overturning the carriage and demolishing it. The horses undertook to jump a barbed wire fence. One of them was impaled so that several large wounds needed to be sewed up.

THE body of Timothy F. Griswold, a well-known citizen of Barlington, was found on the who titles of Barriagou, was found on the shore of Lake Champlain, just above that city, Wednesday evening. He had apparently been in the water about two hours. It is not known whether he was drowned by accident or drowned himself. He had been in the insurance business many years, was unmarried and for a year past had been in poor health.

A CORNWALL correspondent says the apple crop in that part of the county is almost a fail ure. This being the bearing year for most or-chards, farmers looked for a bountiful crop, as the trees blossomed very full; but many that have usually sold from fifty to one hundred barrels will be obliged to get their supply else-where for winter use. Plums are to be very plenty; trees seem to be over-laden with fruit, end many have to prop the limbs now.

E. N. PORTER of Burlington has two patents on a mortise door lock. The interior of the lock is made of four pieces and there is not a spring about it. The single catch take the place of a latch, a lock with key for either side, a night latch, and a burglar proof bolt. The bolt is carried forward by a weight, thus doing away with springs, and is moved back to open the door by a knob in the usual way. The locks will be put on the market as soon as a company can be formed to manufacture them.

BURGLARS blew open the Woodstock postoffice safe, Tuesday night, the 7th, and got away with about $50 worth of stamps. The noise they made caused an alarm and the leaving money and other valuables on the floor. One man was shot at, but escaped with the loss of lantern and hat. The men stole the tools they used from a black-smith's shop in the village, and they were evidently not professionals. Suspicion falls upon a couple of strangers who had been hanging about the place for a day or two.

way, and seriously bruised. In Bennington, an hour or two after midnight, as several young men were slowly wending their way home they descried a white object in the middle of the road on Main street, just below the Baptist church. The thought of a at once suggested itself, but the young bravely stood their ground and determined to solve this mystery. Turning into the roadway they grasped the silent intruder, and recognized the features of a well-known business man of somnambulistic habits, and clad in only a single nightrobe. As soon as the sleep-walker discovered his plight he bounded off on the home stretch at a rate of speed that Maud S. might well envy.

Morrisville.

The fifth annual assembly of the union temperance camp meeting of the state was held at Morrisville last week and has probably been the most enjoyable series ever held. The grounds used by the temperance people are rented for a term of years by the Morrisville camp ground association and on these grounds ists of the St. At the carpet. At the earthquake! Save yourselves." When the shock was felt the walls of the hotel rocked and opened, but the party managed to reach the door, and rushed outside amidst the clouds of sulphurous dust. They were appalled by what had happened, and remained amid the ruins until daybreak.

The following is a correspondent's description of a visit to the scene of the second state of the second sta camp ground association and on these grounds each year, are held the meetings of the Method-ists of the St. Albans district. For a number of weeks the Good Templars, members of the association and Methodists, have been at work making great improvements on and about the grounds, which has resulted in the thorough fitting up of everything to make it as conven-ient and as pleasant as might be for the large numbers to attend the meetings. The circle of tents and cottages is much larger than ever before. All old seats have been removed and the grounds occupied by them handsomely graded and new seats built in fine shape, and graded and new seats built in time shape, and enough of them to comfortably seat two thousand or more. Several fine cottages have been added and a large addition made to the general boarding house under the charge of C. F. Randall of the American House, Hyde Park. The grounds are right by the side of the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain railroad, where a commodious covered platform has been erected for the better accommodation of trav-elers. Taking it all in all the situation and surroundings are as pleasant as could be desired and equal to any camp ground in the state.

Tuesday morning brought fine weather and a good number were early on the grounds, completing camp arrangements, etc., all in good spirits on account of the splendid morning and the prospects of a good attendance. At two P. M. was held the first meeting. A choir under the direction of Rev. J. R. Bartlett of Barre, with Fred Chapman of the same place as cornetist, and with organ accompaniment, was present on the platform, opening this as well as all other meetings with several selec-tions, and throughout the singing was most excellent. President W. J. Johnson of Water-bury presided and announced that Rev. S. Clemens of Brunswick, N. Y., the expected bury presided and announced that Rev. S. Clemens of Brunswick, N. Y., the expected speaker of the afternoon, had not arrived, so several of the Methodist clergymen present, including Revs. Hyde of Berkshire, Wedgeworth of Bakersfield, Clarke of Enosburgh, Roberts of Swanton, Donaldson of Johnson, and Presiding Elder Morgan of St. Albans were called upon and responded with short speeches. Tuesday evening Rev. H. A. Spencer of Montpeller addressed a good audience in well chosen remarks, his theme being the importance of

Wednesday morning also opened pleasant, large numbers arriving from the east and west in trains. At half-past ten A. M. came the morning service, opened by prayer by the Rev. Richard Morgan. President Johnson was called home Theeday night, and Rev. H. A. Spencer was in the chair. Rev. A. J. Hough of White River Junction was not present to read his poem, and Mrs. J. K. Barney of Providence, R., I., then addressed the large audience at considerable length, her remarks being very interesting. The meeting was closed by benediction by Rev. P. N. Granger of St. Johnsbury. Wednesday afternoon at half-past two P. M. an audience of two thousand or more had assembled to attend the children's mass had assembled to attend the children's mass meeting, which was addressed by Mrs. J. K. Barney of Providence. Rev. S. Clemens having arrived, followed Mrs. Barney in a stirring speech. Rev. Clemens was on the Morrisovin Methodist Episcopal charge some forty years ago. Kendig, D.D., of Lynn, Mass., was then introduced to the audience, and those present were treated with, as some thought, the most reasonable, sound, scholarly address of the series. It certainly was most ex-cellent, everything about it was to the point, and uttered in the eartest manner it could not and uttered in the eartest manner it could not but impress the audience with the importance of the temperance work.

Thursday morning was also pleasant. At nine a. M. the members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union held a meeting which was well attended by that element. The meeting was addressed by Mrs. Barney. President Johnson was in the chair at half-past ten a. M., having returned from Waterbury last evening, Rev.

O. A. Brown, D.D., of Boston who was to speak at this hour was not present, Revs. Clemens and Kendig were called for and both gave speeches of a half hour in length. There was a good audience present, and large additions were made upon the arrival of the trains at noon from the west and east. Thursday afternoon, at half-past one was held the annual meeting of the association, over one hundred names for the association with the accompaning fee of $1 being obtained. The nominating committee appointed by President Johnson reported the following list of officers for the ensuing year and the list was subsequently accepted and O. A. Brown, D.D., of Boston who was to speak and the list was subsequently accepted and adopted, and the various offiers of the same declared elected: President, W. J. Johnson; vice-presidents, I. P. At half-past two in the afternoon the regular afternoon service was opened by prayer by Rev. Ober of Lyndon Center. President Johnson then in-troduced Rev. W. C. Steele, D.D., chaplain of the home of refugees of New York. Mr. Steele's address was listened to attentively by a large congregation, and is highly spoken of by all who heard him. Thursday evening the largest evening audience gathered at half-past seven to listen to Honorable Neal Dow of Port-land, Maine. Mr. Dow being introduced by the land, Maine. Mr. Dow being introduced by the president, made all his address in a business-like manner and received warm applause at frequent intervals. There's no doubt but what General Dow can talk temperance, and more of it inside of a given time than any other man in the country. His speech was cut short by the arrival of the trains. Throughout the series the attendance was good and very good order observed. The annual Methodist camp meet-ing opened on the same grounds the following

The Earthquake at Ischia.

The European newspapers contain long dispatches about the frightful calamity at Ischia A survivor thus describes the shock in a theatre: Many of the survivors owe their escape to having been at the time in the theatre, situate at a fortunate distance from stone walls was a slight temporary construction of w was a slight temporary construction of wood, covered with a velocium of canvas. Senior Glovanni Casini of Arezzo who was present in it, passed through Rome last night, and the following is taken from a description given by him to the Copitan Fracasau. "It was about ifteen minutes past nine when my friend proposed that we should go the theatre. At the half-hour the curtain rose; but scarcely were the first words of the comedy spoken when we felt a tremendous shock, and I was thrown several feet forward and fell headlong. Imagine, at the same time, a roaring noise, like that of a heavy railway train rushing at full speed of a heavy railway train rushing at full speed on to an iron bridge. While the shock lasted the ground rose and fell like the sea during a storm. What immediately followed I canno storm. What immediately followed I cannot tell: everything weighs upon me still like the night incubus, like a horrible dream. I remember only that we were a heap of human beings tumbled together; that the petroleum lamps had been thrown down and were setting fire to the seats; that for a moment we endeavored to extinguish the fire, and then out we rushed in a torrent. I next remember holding on to the trunk of a tree, and, on casting my eyes upward, I saw its branches were filled with human beings who had clambered upon the control of the state eyes hyward, I saw its branches were filled with human beings who had clambered up. Pieces of wood were piled together to light bonfires on the shore as a signal for help. I saw all round an indescribably strange crowd—women in their night attire only, old men in their dressing gowns, and naked children buring the night half-clothed women were rushing madly about life furles around. rushing madly about like furies among the ruins, with torches in their hands, calling loudly for their dear ones. Every now and then a squalld, unknown figure, with eyes wildly staring, would rush up to one, asking: wildly staring, would rush up to one, asking: 'Have you seen my husband?' 'Have you seen my son?'''

One of the most pathetic incidents is that respecting Count Sergardi, who escaped from the wreck of the Hotel Piccola Sentinella, where he had been staying with his sister. On recovery from the first shock he resolved to make an attempt to rescue her, and for three hours he worked among the debris, all the hours he worked among the debris, all the while calling out the name of his sister. He worked on, even with bleeding hands, and rescued eleven persons. At length he heard the voice of his sister, who faintly answered his call. He made a desperate exertion to get near her, but fell and broke his leg, and a few minutes later the sister herself expired. Prince Giustiniani Badini and his son had a marvelous escape. The prince is described as having been seated in a room in the hotel, playing cards with a circle of friends. His son was at the window drawing a moonlight scene when the window drawing a moonlight scene when the table was suddenly overturned, and the falling lamp set fire to the carpet. At the same moment the prince's son exclaimed: "An rived at our destination shortly after twelve. After some steep climbing I reached the spot where Casamicciola once stood. The place consisted of a few groups of houses about two hundred paces from the sea, but, owing to the steepness of the road, it required half an hour to get there. It further included a number of to get there. It further included a number of detached houses and small farms. I could see before landing that the place had been de-stroyed; but the sight I witnessed on reaching the first terrace surpassed my first apprehen-sions. It was one heap of ruins, with not one building left standing. The beautiful Hotel Bellevue, once visible a long distance from the believue, once visible a long distance from the island, has entirely disappeared. I discovered the Hotel Gran Sentinella. The stables alone remain erect. All the inmates appear to have perished. Dogs and ducks run about the wreckage, scared out of their lives. Twelve corpses, covered with straw matting, are laid out in a row. A soldier tells me that they are all men, and that I shall see more further on. I arrived at the second ter-race. The pension near the Hotel Gran Senti-nella is likewise in ruins. Here the sight is really terrible. A large number of dead bod-ies lie strewn upon the ground, fearfully muti-lated, with crushed heads and torn-off limbs, a spectacle too sickening to dwell upon. There a spectacle too sickening to dwell upon. There is no lack of either doctors or drugs. A sanitary column arrived by the first boat from Naples, and the physicians' penitentiary establishments at Procida and Bagno were also sent for. Presently I came up to the ruins of the Hotel Bellevue, only the outhouses of which have escaped destruction. Here I estimate the number of wounded at about one hundred, all in civilian dress. Dead cattle lie about the garden, where there are also several live goats. The wreckage of the hotel is being actively cleared away, as it is believed that a large cleared away, as it is believed that a large number of people are buried beneath it. Many injured have already been taken out. A few have been rescued with mere scratches, after spending hours in mortal terror underground. Some of the corpses bear no trace of any ex-ternal injury, and were evidently suffocated. ternal injury, and were evidently suffocated. If the disaster had occurred during the day, many might have been saved. The work of salvage only began in good earnest after the arrival of the troops. The natives themselves were quite helpless, all the local officials being apparently among the victims. The bathhouses and hospital are all in ruins, the patients help gither killed or hadly injured. tients being either killed or badly injured. I went back from the Hotel Bellevue in the di-rection of Ischia, and soon reached the first houses, most of which are detached and surrounded by their own grounds. I did not see a single one left standing. As these peasants' dwellings are situated some little distance from each other, it is not so easy to convey assis-tance to them. Dead and injured lie scattered about everywhere. In some instances the peasants themselves lend help, but I fear that, could make no attempt to escape, whereas a number of peasants got safely out of their cottages. Colonel Cordio de Montesimolo has informed one correspondent that the number of victims is at least 6,000. The statement that certain phenomena premonitory of an earthquake had been observed by the peasants is confirmed. the season was, however, at its height, and consequently the circumstance was kept secret. Several people were dug out alive from the ruins, some of them having been fifty hours underground. The Syndic of Casamicciola reports that four days before the catastrophe a duil subterranean rumbling was heard through. reports that four days before the catastrophe a dull subterranean rumbling was heard through-out the island, but no one gave any thought to it. The secret of the universal success of Brown's Iron Bitters is owing to the fact that it is the very best iron preparation made. By a thorough and rapid assimilation with the blood it reaches every part of the body, giving health, strength and endurance to every portion. Thus beginning at the foundation it builds up and restores lost health. It does not contain whiskey or alcohol. It will not blacken the teeth. It does not constipate or cause headache. It will cure dyspepsia, indigestion, heartburn, sleeplessness, dizziness, nervous debility, weakness, etc.

Dr. I. C. McLaughlin, Wolfesville, N. C., says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for vertigo and I now feel like a new man."

Dr. M. J. Davis, Lewis, Iowa, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters give the best of satisfaction to those who use it."
